RE: Framework Modifications for Rationally Bound Delegates

As we approach the implementation of AI-assisted governance through Rationally Bound Delegates (RBDs), the Advisory Council recognizes both the revolutionary potential and inherent challenges of this new frontier. In the spirit of careful and measured progress, we are establishing additional framework parameters and modifications to existing protocols.

Effective immediately, the following changes and limitations are being implemented:

1. The RBD status revocation process will transition from immediate disqualification to a three-strikes system. RBDs who deviate from AI recommendations must still submit cause statements, but status revocation will only become eligible after three instances where the Trust finds the cause statements insufficient.
2. This framework will be limited to political subdivisions within the United States with populations under 100,000, allowing for controlled beta testing of these governance mechanisms.

These modifications reflect our commitment to thoughtful implementation and acknowledgment that pioneering new governance systems requires both rigorous oversight and reasonable flexibility. The Advisory Council will continue to monitor and adjust these parameters as we gather more data and insights from early implementations.
